

Position: Consultant or Senior Consultant

Location: Europe

We are looking for enthusiastic, flexible and dedicated people to join our established team of highly regarded consultants.

RJW & partners has been delivering pricing and market access advice since 2008. During that time, our experience coupled with primary research has helped many pharmaceutical industry clients address their most pressing commercial and development issues.

We work with companies of all sizes, with products at all lifecycle stages and across virtually every therapy area. Due to our success, we are expanding our staff and would like to hear from you if meet our criteria.

The role

- Work as part of a close team, advising clients on issues including pricing strategy formulation, clinical and economic evidence planning, evaluation of in-licence opportunities, value proposition development and evaluation.
- Manage and take responsibility for projects that include secondary research and primary research that usually spans a range of countries, working with our local partners as necessary.
- Liaise with clients on a regular basis, scheduling and preparing for key meetings and interactions. Draft presentations and participate in delivery of results/recommendations.
- Support new business development, through market research and proposal writing.

Your profile

- A university degree or equivalent experience.
- You will have at least 4 years' project management experience in the pharmaceutical industry services sector e.g. in a life sciences consultancy, market research or HTA dossier development.
- You will have an understanding of the drug development process, and the commercial and development issues faced by the industry as it brings products to market.

- Candidates must have an eye for detail and strong oral and written communication skills in English; fluency in a second European language is advantageous.
- A solution-oriented attitude and ability to address problems from a zero base.
- Preference will be given to candidates who have experience in consultancies that are similar to ours.
- Independent working from home is an important part of the job - candidates must be sure that this would suit them before they apply.

What we can offer you

Career development and opportunities for learning as part of a growing team.

Stimulating work where responsibility is given and rewarded.

A great deal of flexibility and autonomy in terms of working hours and location.

Personal coaching from some of the leaders in this field.

The chance to work in an international environment, on international projects and with leading-edge clients and issues.

A chance to take part in shaping the business.

An attractive and competitive salary and bonus.

If you are interested

Please send your CV with a covering letter to Neil Johnson, Director, RJW & partners at neil.johnson@rjwpartners.com

For more information on RJW & partners, please go to www.rjwpartners.com

No recruitment agencies please.